ST. NICHOLAS.

SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE

FOR

GIRLS AND BOYS.

February Number Now Ready.

*The LONDON ACADEMY, of December 22d, 1877, says: "In ST. NICHOLAS we recognize the best display of juvenile literature that we have yet seen. * * * We have no hesitation in saying that both in the letter press and in the pictures this American magazine has no rival.*

In ST NICHOLAS for December, the Grand Christmas Number, was begun a charming new

Serial Story by Miss Alcott

"Under the Lilacs," illustrated by MARY HALLOCK FOOTE, to continue during the year. This same Christmas number, of which one hundred thousand copies were printed, contained the opening chapters of A "ROBINSON CRUSOE" STORY for boys, "Tower-Mountain," by GUSTAVUS FRANKENSTEIN, also poems by LONGFELLOW and BRYANT, a portrait of Miss Alcott, half a dozen short stories, pictures, poems, etc., etc. It is the handsomest number of a child's magazine over issued

The NEW YORK TRIBUNE says:

"ST NICHOLAS has a list of contributors such as no other child's magazine, or few publications of any sort, in the world can boast. It has caused the best writers in America to turn their attention to the task of giving delight and imparting culture to children. In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and ST NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1878,

Beside the SERIAL STORIES above announced, will have a short serial story by the author of The Schonberg-Cotta Family; and THREE SPLENDID SERIALS FOR BOYS, one of which "DRIFTED INTO PORT," by EDWIN HODDER, an English writer, will begin in March. "Around the world in a Yacht, Boys!" has been promised by a brilliant writer, now on the actual tour of the world in his own yacht. There will be contributions by a daughter of the famous Peter Parley, and a Letter to Young Americans by

GEORGE MACDONALD.

The "HOW" Series of instructive papers by various author will tell HOW to bind your own books; HOW they mine coal; HOW to enjoy yourselves at home, HOW to be an agreeable guest, HOW to entertain company, HOW to be a carpenter, HOW to make an ice-boat, HOW to build a house, How India rubber is gathered, HOW matches are made, HOW to be a Parlor Magician; HOW money is made, HOW mackerel are caught, HOW they laid the Atlantic cable, HOW they mine in California, HOW they work in the tea-country, etc. There will be also a series of stories and sketches of Foreign Life, such as "Old Nicolai" (a Russian story) "A Day among the Welsh Castles," "Easter in Germany," "The Indians of the Amazon," "How Kitty was lost in a Turkish Bazar," "Master Montezuma," a Mexican story), "Hansa the Lapp Midden," and many others.

TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE,

Jack-in the Pulpit, the Young Contributors Department, "Letter Box," "Riddle Box," and "For Very Little Folk," will be continued.

The veteran Magazine, which long ago outgrew its original title of the New Monthly Magazine, has not in the least abated the popularity it won at the outset, but has added to it in many ways, and has kept fairly abreast of the times thanks to the enterprise of the publishers and the tact and wisdom of its editors. THE STATE COLLEGE.

Prof George L Vose, of Bowdoin College, makes some strictures in the Press, on [illegible] of ours in behalf of the Maine State College. He puts him[illegible] forward, apparently as the champion of Bowdoin College, which he seems to regard as a rival institution to that at Orono. We were not before aware that there was any antagonism between the two institutions of learning—if the Professor will permit us to give that title to the establishment at Orono. We had thought that they were occupying separate fields of usefulness, and each doing a good work for the State. But it appears from the Professor's statement that the Brunswick College has nearly abandoned its classical studies and included in its curriculum everything taught at Orono except the trifling matter of agriculture. Hence the State College has no reason for being. Bowdoin fills the field. This may be so, but we submit that the [illegible] would have come with better grace from some other person than one of its own professors.

The special grievance of Prof Vose seems to be that the College at Orono is receiving aid from the State. It is turning out civil engineers, he says, who must necessarily go out of the State for employment, and thus make no return for the education received. But the constitution of Maine provides that the Legislature shall encourage and suitably endow academies, colleges and seminaries of learning, and under this provision Bowdoin has received the bounty of the State to a large amount, in both land and money. It has turned out a great many professional men, but we never heard that they were expected to confine their labors within the boundaries of the State.

The Professor complains that the State College is reaching out after literary and classical studies. It actually came within two votes of teaching Latin. Horrible to think of! But then, according to his own showing, Bowdoin has seized all the special studies of Orono—always with the insignificant exception of agriculture. [illegible]

We have been a good deal amused at the [illegible] of the opponents of the State College—who we have observed by the way are always partisans of the [illegible] institutions. Prof. Vose objects to the introduction of classical studies at Orono, but a worthy clergyman once denounced the College to us because it did not fit its students to teach in the High Schools of the State. Prof. Vose speaks contemptuously of the teaching of a parcel of young men—a parcel [illegible] such as might have graduated at Bowdoin—a parcel of young men to analyze manure. But a distinguished gentleman of the State once, in our hearing, made it a strong objection to the State College that it did not teach its students the value of the various manures. He went further, and gravely objected that they merely raised potatoes on the farm, and that the boys ate them. We confess we thought that a very good use to make of the potatoes—but then after showing that they could be raised they might have thrown them away.

But after all, the secret grief of the Professor—which will come out—is that the endowment fund of the United States was not bestowed upon some already existing college for the establishment of a department of agriculture. He doesn't say Bowdoin, but then he has already told us that that institution has everything in its curriculum except agriculture, and so, of course, only needs that trifling addition to make it perfect and happy. He complains that the agricultural instruction at Orono is merely theoretical and not practical, but he fails to show wherein a department of a regular college would have been better qualified to carry on an experimental farm than a separate institution established for that special purpose. The government of the United States set apart a fund to establish colleges for instruction in agriculture and the mechanic arts, and it nowhere appears that it was the intention to endow the "regular" colleges with that fund, or to make the agricultural and mechanical schools mere bobtails to the classical institutions already existing, and where this has been done the success has not been such as to justify the experiment. It was undoubtedly quite natural, and in accord ance with human nature—which is not greatly modified by a classical education—that the regular institutions, which had so long been the recipients of public bounty, should have hankered after this splendid endowment, and begrudged its bestowal upon a plebian institution which was to concern itself merely with agricultural and mechanical matters. But it happens that the fund was intended to give the people instruction in these very matters, and not at all to endow the classical colleges of the land. It was seen that there can be, and is, such a thing as an agricultural college, and that in the old world, and notably in Germany, such institutions have done a great work for the improvement of agriculture. It was also seen that the mechanic arts might be greatly improved by the establishment of technical schools, such as in France—where they are liberally sustained at the expense of the government—have given great superiority to the manufactures of that country. The Maine State College stands for this idea—the idea of industrial education. That it has as yet met with but partial success is owing mainly to the fact that this idea has not yet obtained a lodgment in the minds of our people. Our farmers as a body, do not appreciate the advantages it offers them and their sons. The idea that there can be no education which is not classical still dominates the public mind. Prof Vose triumphantly remarks that "the 'education for farmers' which we hear so much about, has not attracted the young men of Maine as was anticipated." And why not, precisely because such education has been persistently decried, and especially by the friends of the regular colleges. It is not surprising that the prestige of the older institution, with the allurements held out by the professions, should draw young men away from industrial education, but it still remains true that such education is greatly needed and that the State is wise in making provision for it. It is urged against the State College that it is giving too much attention to literary and classical studies, but this comes with a bad grace from those who have persistently refused to give it an appropriation for the establishment of work shops. We are not saying that the College might not be better adapted to the purposes for which it was established, but we are quite sure that it cannot be with the niggardly appropriations made for it. It has had a tremendous amount of prejudice to fight against and yet we believe it has done a good work for the State. Prof. Vose intimates vaguely that some dark doings are going on within its walls. Listening to him one would think there must be all of "treason, stratagems, and spoils." We are deceived, he says, in regard to what it is doing, and he further declares that the friends of this institution do not care to have the establishment examined too closely. A committee of the Legislature have visited the institution but we find no startling revelations in their report. The College seems to be making very good use of such facilities as it has in the instruction of one hundred and eighteen students the great majority of whom could not have obtained an education at any other college. As to the practical work it is doing for agriculture something of that was seen at the [illegible] of the Board of Agriculture held at Alfred last fall where the students gave the results of experiments, exhibiting on several [illegible], as to the best methods of preparing food for the fattening of animals, best modes of getting ground ready for planting or seeding and preparing seed, best kinds and qualities of fertilizers for different soils for grass and tillage, so satisfactory were the results shown that a gentleman who was present, and who is not at all a partisan of the State College as a separate institution, informs us that he has considered that the College has done well for intelligent and skilled farming, and that it believes the State is making money by investment in such an institution.

INTER CULTURAL TILLAGE.

At a recent meeting of the Connecticut State Board of Agriculture, Dr E. Lewis Sturtevant, in discussing the subject of inter cultural tillage, after reviewing the received theories for tilling the soil, went on to give his own ideas upon the subject. Formerly it was believed that the advantages coming from the tillage to the soil were due to some action of change produced upon, or in the soil.

His object in tilling was largely for effect upon the roots of plants while growing. [illegible] the ground breaks the roots. Broken roots throw out many new roots, or the broken end is thus multiplying the feeding power of the plant. Roots grow in length in warm weather and increase in number fast. If the farmers then [illegible] the [illegible] of a field is filled with the roots of the plants cultivated, the stronger will be those plants, and the more plant food they can take from the soil. But tillage for the purpose of cutting the roots must not be carried too far nor continued too long. Breaking the roots tends to check the growth of fodder in beans or plants, and decreases the amount of straw in grain crops at the same time the tendency to produce seed is increased. He had, by severe root pruning of a stalk of corn, forced it to throw out as many as twenty three ears of various sizes. Pruning of the roots and tilling of the soil for that purpose should be discontinued as soon as the plant is in bloom. Then you want the accumulated vigor of the plant for perfecting the grain. To obtain a great crop of grain we must feed the plant high. High feeding, without root pruning to check growth, gives us too large a proportion of fodder and consequently too dense a shade for the health of the plants. We desire therefore to dwarf the plant while we increase the proportion of its seed. In closing he invited farmers to try these experiments for themselves on a small scale at first and then see whether this theory is a correct one.

Many questions were asked by members of the audience concerning the details of the Doctor's practice. To the question, whether he considered this system of root pruning applicable to the potato plant he answered, that he doubted it but had not experimented very much in that direction. The habits of the potato plant are entirely different from those of the corn and grain plants. Some farmers had misunderstood the theory and had carried the practice too far. Disturbing the roots after the seed begins to form, does harm by destroying the capacity of the plant for perfecting its seed. He acknowledged that there are difficulties in the way, in practice, as all plants in a cornfield do not mature at exactly the same time. Alluding to his own experiments in trying to obtain large crops of corn, the speaker said that he had failed for several reasons, but chiefly he believed for the want of seed of the right kind. Many of the stalks in every cornfield are barren, and it should be possible, he thought, to produce varieties of corn of which every stalk shall bear an ear. When this is done our yields may be greatly increased.

In regard to selecting corn for seed, he said that he believed the butt kernels on the cob would produce the earliest corn, while by planting only the tip end kernels, the ears would be lengthened while the variety will be made later in ripening. In reply to the question, how many times he would cultivate for the sake of root pruning, he replied, three or more times, running very closely to the hills at first, but would stop as soon as the tassels began to appear. To the question, whether it would not be better still to plant in hills and root-prune both ways, he said he should doubt the propriety of killing the corn entirely. In the discussion which followed, an account was given of a field of corn, planted for fodder, late in June, which, when about a foot high, was badly cut to pieces by a severe hail storm which stripped the leaves and gave the corn a terrible check, but which yielded in the autumn one hundred and forty bushels of ears of good sound corn besides what was stolen by crows and turkeys.

In answer to a question, whether root pruning had been tried on other plants than corn with success, Mr. Cheever said that gardeners who grow tomato plants for sale were well aware that transplanting and breaking the roots while the plants are but two or three inches high is of great value. Plants left to grow in the beds, without transplanting made a few long straggling roots which could not supply the plant with sufficient moisture to bear transplanting into the [illegible] ground in hot weather, but when [illegible] in a new bed and properly protected for a few days a multitude of new roots are thrown out which enable the plants after a week or two to stand almost any kind of treatment. The top is checked and the root growth [illegible] by transplanting.

Tuesday forenoon as Harvey Scribner of Gardiner, was driving in his sleigh, accompanied by James H. Howland they drove through a bad place along side the road, and capsized. The horse started off at a fearful pace, he then took on to the sidewalk near Mr. Marston's store, and remained upon it until he had passed Mr. Winslow's store. In Mr. Chase's store he smashed all the glass in the lower sash of one window. In front of the post office he knocked down David Loring of Gardiner, and Patrick Mooney, of the Togus Asylum. Mr. Jack had stepped out of Mr. Winslow's store when the horse struck him. Mr. Loring and Mr. Mooney were carried into Messrs. White's store, where Drs. Smith, Strout and Young dressed their wounds. Mr. Loring's skull was fractured and he died that night from the effect of his injuries. Mr. Mooney received a severe scalp wound.

THE TWO GORTSCHAKOFFS.

[From the New York Times.]

The biography of the two famous men who have immortalized the title of Gortschakoff, is virtually the history of Russia for the last seventy years; for it would be hard to name any prominent event during that period, with which the one in his military, or the other in his civil capacity, has not been in some way connected. The elder of the two, Peter Dimitrievitch, born in 1789, entered the Army as a mere boy, just in time to receive his baptism of fire "at the terrible battle of Eylau," when 25,000 Russians and 30,000 French lay strewn over the great waste of snow between Preussisch-Eylau and Serpallen. A few moths later, he was present at the sanguinary repulse of Napoleon's attack on the intrenched camp of Heilsberg, where his uncle and namesake, commanding the Russian right, bore the brunt of the battle. After the peace of Tilsit in 1807, he was transferred to the Army of the North, and took part in the last battle of Finnish independence. Still unwearied of active service, he exchanged into the Army of the Danube, and served on Kutuzoff's staff during the memorable siege of Rustchuk in 1811, when 18,000 Turks, left unsheltered on a swampy island, almost without food, and cannonaded incessantly from both banks of the river, held out stubbornly till more than half their number had perished.

The great crisis of 1812 recalled the Danube army to nobler work, and Prince Gortschakoff reached the Beresina just in time to witness all the horrors of that memorable passage, which compressed whole years of human agony into one fatal night. At the close of the war, he obtained a high appointment in the Caucasus, where his services in the suppression of the Abkhasian revolt of 1820 were rewarded by a diamond-hilted sword from the hand of the Czar himself. The Turkish war of 1828-9 displayed on a wider field his rare administrative faculty, which, a few years later, earned him the Governor-Generalship of Western Siberia.

His fifteen years' tenure of this post was undoubtedly the noblest, if not the most brilliant, of his life. The reform of the oppressive recruiting system, the facilities afforded to trade and communication, the encouragement to colonization, the judicious transfer of the seat of government from remote Tobolsk to the more central point of Omsk, are all due to him; and he was meditating further improvements when the giving way of his health sent him back to Moscow, to enjoy, as he hoped, a peaceful old age among his friends. But there was no peace for him. The outbreak of the Crimean war brought the gray-haired veteran of sixty-five into the field again; and his services in Turkey and the Crimea are too well known to need repetition. In 1855 he was made a member of the Imperial Council, and spent the last years of his long and eventful life at Moscow, where he died on the 4th of April, 1858.

The younger Prince, (Alexander Mikhailovitch Gortschakoff,) born ten years later than his famous kinsman, devoted himself as zealously to the profession of diplomacy as to the latter to that of arms, but unlike his predecessor, he rose by slow degrees to the commanding position which his talents merited. The earlier events of his career—his education at the Academy of Tsarskoe-Selo, near St Petersburg, his entrance into the diplomatic service at the age of three-and-twenty, his first mission to England, in 1824, as Secretary to the Russian Embassy in London—are familiar to all. At this time he acquired a knowledge of English life and habits which was destined to serve him well in after years; but his subsequent transfer to such secondrate political centres as Florence and Stuttgart, shows how inadequately his talents were then appreciated by his superiors. It was not till thirty years after his first entrance into public life, that the Crimean war, which was the closing scene of his great namesake's triumphs, became the foundation of his own. Count Nesselrode, whose keen eye had long since discerned the talents of the future Chancellor, sent him to Vienna in 1854, with orders to "keep Austria neutral, at whatever cost." The difficult misson was admirably discharged. Again and again did the pressure of Western Europe from without and excited Hungary from within, almost force the vacillating Cabinet into war; but Gortschakoff's skill triumphed over all obstacles, and Russia was saved from her greatest peril.

From that time forth the great statesman's career was one continued triumph. In 1856 he succeeded Count Nesselrode as Minister of Foreign Affairs; in 1862 he became Chancellor of the Empire, in the following year his firm attitude toward the Western powers on the question of the Polish insurrection earned the thanks of the Czar himself. In 1870 he succeeded by a happy mixture of audacity and finesse, in regaining all that had been lost by the Crimean war; and he is still, at the age of 79, the master-spirit of Russian diplomacy. In person, the Prince is of middle size and well-proportioned figure, with a quiet, courteous manner, and a remarkably smooth, well-preserved face, whose only sign of age lies in the spectacles that hide his large, expressive eyes. Old as he is, his industry is still as unflagging as ever, and, notwithstanding the periodical rumors of his retirement from public life, he bids fair to outlast many of his younger colleagues.

The evidence in the Electoral count bargain, compiled by Hon. William E. Chandler has been published in pamphlet form. The publication contains the letters of Mr. Chandler and William Lloyd Garrison on President Hayes' Southern policy, an appendix reviewing the excuses of the Louisiana bargainers, and will be sent postage or express paid, for six cents per copy, (which barely covers the cost of publication) from the Monitor and Statesman office, Concord N. H., or by Gibson Bros., 1012 Pennsylvania avenue Washington D. C.

An Havana letter of February, 23d, says the insurgent chiefs having submitted to the terms offered by the Spanish government and restoration of peace in the Island may be regarded as an accomplished fact. The 25th of February was designated as the date on which the insurgents should lay down their arms, and on the 28th peace would be officially proclaimed by the government.

"CIVIL SERVICE CHRONOLOGY."

[From the Boston Traveller.]

January, 1877—Contest in the Massachusetts Legislature for the Senatorship; A. W. Beard, manager for Hoar; W. A. Simmons opposed.

August—Under the policy agitation, Mr. Hoar dodges and declines to preside at the State Convention.

August (continued)—President Hayes goes out of his way to visit Mr. Hoar in Worcester.

September—Mr. Hoar consents to preside at the convention and makes a speech.

September (continued)—Mr. Hoar presides and makes a speech to the convention, endorsing with the most fulsome praise the policy and civil service reform.

November and December, the Traveller accuses Mr. Hoar of repudiating his own high-sounding professions, and of laboring for the nomination of the man who was "faithful to the Senator," and Mr. Hoar's organs charge the Traveller with misrepresentation, and indignantly deny the accusation against him.

December, 1877, and January, 1878, Mr. Hoar votes for all the objectionable Executive nominees, and in many cases his vote alone is instrumental in confirming them.

The same months (continued) Mr. Hoar reminds the President of the Worcester speech and of his steady voting with the Democratic Senators, and demands in return the appointment of Mr. Beard and the punishment of Mr. Simmons.

February 26th, 1878, the President, suspending his civil service rules and forgetting Mr. Hoar's speech, appoints Mr. Beard.

With this civil service chronology before them, the public may judge for themselves whether the Traveller has not been justified in opposing at every stage the ambitious schemes of Mr. Hoar, as a man totally devoid of fixed political principles.

THE NEW YORK PENSION AGENCY. In the Senate Wednesday afternoon a discussion arose on a bill which was passed, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to appoint a Pension Agent pro tem. at New York, as Mr. Coster, appointed as the successor to Col. Frank Howe, had not obtained his bonds, and 14,000 pensioners will be disappointed next Monday unless some temporary arrangement can be made by which they can be paid. Mr. Conkling in his remarks on the subject censured the President for appointing a man who cannot give bond at once, and for permitting him to hold the office for three weeks without giving bonds, instead of appointing some one in his place who could give bonds without a day's delay. Mr. Blaine said the bill was an attempt to cover up by general statute the specific failure of an officer to put in his bond when he had every opportunity to do so. It was to give him a longer time to file his bond, and no such case had ever occurred before when a pension agent was not ready to perform his duty, and that there were more than 20 Senators on this floor who could name men in New York city, of either party, who could have given the required bond within 24 hours. Here was a pension agent appointed, under the highest possible standard of civil service reform, who had been hawking around New York city for months and could not give his bond. Now the Senator from Kansas comes in with a bill for his relief. He objected to any special legislation to give an officer more time to fill his bond.

It is related of the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon that one Sunday he, in his pointed way, cried out from his pulpit: "There's a shoemaker Last Sunday he sold shoes that amounted to ninepence, and there was fourpence profit on it." In the audience there was a shoemaker who had done that very thing. The mystery bothered him all the week; so on the next Sunday he had his girl open the shop while he again went to the church. "Ah, sinner!" Spurgeon began, "sinning by proxy is just as bad as though you sinned yourself. It's of no use for you to come here yourself, and leave your daughter to keep shop." The shoemaker was dumbfounded. It set him thinking, and he was converted. Spurgeon, hearing of the circumstance, said he believed the Holy Spirit inspired his soul.

A New York steam-dredging firm has contracted with the Russian government to dredge a ship canal, twenty feet in depth and ten miles in length, through the lagoon which separates Constadt from St. Petersburg. The plan embraces also a commercial port at the further extremity of the canal. The work is to be begun by October next and finished in 1883. By means of this canal a large part of the navy can be withdrawn from the exposed position of Constadt and sheltered under inland defensive works.

The Concord Monitor says: The statement made by the Washington correspondent of a Boston newspaper, that the New Hampshire delegation in Congress had united in an invitation to Gen. James A Garfield, one of the "visiting statesmen," to stump this State in defence of the President's Southern policy, is a lie out of whole cloth, and but for its animus would be too absurd to require any contradiction.

PERISTALTIC LOZENGES.

The effects of COSTIVENESS

When long continued are pains in the head, dizziness, nausea or sickness at the stomach, general uneasiness in the abdominal region, congestion of the liver, and hence an impeded circulation of the blood, colic, and especially the

PILES.

The grand proximate cause of Dyspepsia is debility of the stomach. The torpidity of the liver is apparent from the small quantity of bile discharged from that organ, and also by a dull pain on the right side. Under whichever form

DYSPEPSIA

Appears there is always languor or debility, exertion fatigues, the pulse is weak, the sleep disturbed, the extremities cold, the tongue for the most part furred or covered with a creamy mucous in the morning. No person with a constipated or irregular state of the bowels can have sound health.

It is evident that some gentle laxative, slightly stimulant to the mucous membrane of the intestines, joined with a tonic, that increases the secretions of the liver and gradually strengthening the stomach, must be a reasonable combination and reach the case. That this combination will do, for proof of which we are happy to be able to refer these heretofore disappointed, to the most reliable physicians, who have long used this remedy in their practice, and also to every apothecary, by whom the Peristaltic Lozenges are sold.

These Lozenges will repair the mischief caused by the excessive use of those "Patent Pills," with which the country has for years been flooded.

They are so agreeable to the taste, and convenient in form, that children eat them readily after rejecting the usual nauseous remedies. In those symptoms supposed to indicate the presence of Worms, they are a proper remedy.

Price 30 and 60 cents. For sale by druggists, or by mail on receipt of price in P. O. stamps or money.

At 10 o clock a message came from the House announcing that the silver bill had been passed over the President's veto

The President at 1 35 returned the silver bill to the House without his signature and stating his objections

At 1 40 the Speaker laid the veto message before the House and perfect order having been obtained the clerk proceeded to read of which the following is the full text:

To the House of Representatives

After a very careful consideration of the House bill 1093 entitled An Act to authorize the coinage of a silver dollar and to restore its legal tender character I feel compelled to return it to the House of Representatives in which it originated with my objection to its passing Holding the opinion which I expressed in my annual message that neither the interests of the Government nor of the people of the United States would be promoted by disparaging silver as one of the two precious metals which furnish the coinage of the world and that legislation which looks to coinage the volume of [illegible] money to as full a measure of both metals as their relative commercial value will permit would be neither unjust nor inexpedient It has been my earnest desire to concur with Congress in the adoption of such measures to increase the silver coinage of the country as would not impair the obligation of contracts either public or private or injuriously affect the public credit It is only on the conviction that this bill does not meet these essential requirements that I feel it my duty to withhold from it my approval My present official duty as to this bill permits only an attention to the specific objects of the bill which seem to me so important as to justify me in asking from the wisdom and duty of Congress that further consideration of the bill for which the Constitution has in such a way provided

The bill provides for the coinage of silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains each of standard silver to be a legal tender to their nominal value for all debts and dues public and private except when otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract It is well known that the market value of that number of grains of standard silver during the past year has been from 90 to 92 cents as compared with the standard gold dollar Thus the silver dollar authorized by this bill is worth from 8 to 10 per cent less than it purports to be worth and is made a legal tender for debts contracted when the law did not recognize such coins as lawful money The right to pay [illegible] silver or in certificates of silver deposit will when they are issued in a amount to circulate put an end to the receipt of revenue in gold and thus compel the payment of silver for both the principal and interest of public debt $1,143 493 400 of the bonded debt now outstanding was issued prior to February 1873, when the silver dollar was unknown in the circulation of this country and with only a convenient form of silver bullion for exportation $583 440 350 of the bonded debt has been issued since February, 1873, when gold alone was the coin for which the bonds were sold and gold alone was the coin in which both parties to the contract understood that the bonds could be paid

These bonds flowed into the markets of the world, they were paid for in gold when silver had greatly depreciated and when no one would have bought them if it had been understood that they would be paid in silver the sum of $225 000 000 of those bonds has been sold during my administration for gold coin and the United States received the benefit of those sales by a reduction of the rate of interest to four per cent. During the progress of those sales a doubt was suggested as to the coin in which the payment of those bonds would be made and the public announcement was thereupon authorized that it was not to be anticipated that any further legislation of Congress, or any action of any department of the government would sanction or tolerate the redemption of the principal of those bonds, or the payment of the interest thereon except in the coin exacted by the government in exchange for the same In view of that fact it will be justly regarded as a grave breach of the public faith to undertake to pay those bonds principal or interest, in silver coin worth in the the market less than the coin received for them

It is said that the silver dollar made a legal tender by this bill, will under its operation be equivalent in full to the gold dollar Many supporters of the bill believe this would not justify an attempt to pay debts, either public or private in coin inferior in value to the money of the world. The capital defect of the measure is that it contains no provision protecting from its operation preexisting debts in case the coinage, which it creates, shall continue to be of less value than that which was the sole legal tender when they were contracted. It is now proposed for the purpose of taking advantage of the depreciation of silver in the payment of debts, to coin and make a legal tender a silver dollar of less commercial value than a dollar, whether of gold or paper, which is now the lawful money of this country, such a measure it will be hardly questioned will, in the judgment of mankind, be an act of bad faith As to all debts heretofore contracted, the silver dollar should be made a legal tender only at its market value The standard of value should not be changed without the consent of both parties to the contract. The national promises should be kept with unflinching fidelity There is no power to compel a nation to pay its just debts Its credit rests on its honor I cannot approve a bill which in my judgment authorizes the violation of sacred obligations The obligation of public faith transcends all questions of profit or public advantage Its unquestionable maintenance is the dictate as well of the highest experience as well as of the most necessary duty and should ever be carefully guarded by the Executive by Congress and by the people

It is my firm conviction that if the country is to be benefitted by a silver coinage it can be done only by the issue of a silver dollar of full value which will defraud no man and a currency worthless [illegible] than it purports to be will in the end defraud not only creditors but all who are engaged in legitimate business and none more [illegible] than those who are dependent on their daily labor for their daily bread

RUTHERFORD B HAYES

Executive Mansion Feb 28th 18[78]

Before proceeding to vote on the question Will the House on reconsideration pass the bill Mr Cox of N Y made the remark that the message was a charge of fraud by a fraud [illegible] which his colleague Mr McCook made a point of order and the Speaker decided the remark out of order and that it should not be printed in the record The House then proceeded to vote and the silver bill was passed over the President's veto At the close of the roll call it stood yeas 184 nays 73 There will be a few additions both ways

The Speaker announced the vote yeas 196 nays 73 and said in obedience to the requirements of the Constitution two thirds have voted in the affirmative and the bill has passed the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding

The announcement was received with general and pppl[illegible] mark of [illegible] [illegible] and the bill and veto message were then sent to the Senate

At [illegible] went into Committee of the Whole and resumed the consideration of the bill to pension soldiers of the Mexican and Indian wars After speeches by Williams of Ala Williams of Oregon Ryan of Kansas White of Pa and Riddle of Tenn the Committee proceeded to consider the bill by sections

During a speech by Singleton he sent to the clerk's desk and had read a letter from Jeff Davis requesting him (Singleton) to inform the friends of the bill that if the success of the bill depended on excluding him (Davis) from its benefit he hoped that such a provision would be inserted

Mr Singleton proceeded to eulogize Mr Davis declaring that this was but another proof of his great magnanimity and explained that that gentleman had been in favor of delaying as long as possible the act of secession passed by Mississippi in hopes of reconciliation with the North

The Committee rose and the House adjourned

A PIGEON HOLED PETITION

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

I ask your attention to the following communication as showing the want of interest on the part of some of our City Government in encouraging the mechanical interests of our city

In the early part of the last summer the writer with others commenced preparations to build a railroad car shop on the northerly side of Hancock street between Oak and [illegible] streets and for the purpose of making it convenient for the enterprise it was found necessary to have a track connecting the railroad with the shop

A petition was made [illegible] (according to our recollection) by W B Hayford Esq Trustee of the E & N A R R Moses Giddings Esq President of the B & P R R Mr Swazey of the Bucksport Railroad also the Superintendents of said Railroads with a number of the property holders on Hancock street and vicinity and by those who wished to start the shop

The above railroads were about to undertake the narrowing of their track [illegible] and they offered the parties intending to build the car shop [illegible] of the work of narrowing up the rolling stock as they could do it the same price that they would have to pay for it in Portland or elsewhere with the benefit of the expense of transportation The aforesaid petition was handed to the Mayor the third day of July last past on the same evening it was presented to the City Council and referred to the Committee on Streets and Highways The lumber for the shop was procured and hauled to the vicinity of its location and men capable and anxious were ready to do the work According to the records of the City Council this petition has never been reported upon by this Committee and we cannot learn that it has ever received their attention The railroad companies could not postpone their work and sent thousands of dollars of it for car to go abroad that could have been done here for the benefit of our own mechanics

Controversy among the first-class hotels of New York shows that the service is constantly changing from one first-class hotel to the other, and the bills of fare show the same variety of dishes The important fact to travellers, is that the Grand Central offers the same accommodations for one and two dollars per day less than the others

TRUE ECONOMY is not in buying the lowest price articles, The best is cheapest. So with the fine cultivated and plantation grown spices imported by Messrs Pinckney, Jackson & Co, of London and New York, I have just received a shipment of these goods and would specially invite the attention of all consumers to them. These spices are not only absolutely pure, but are without a doubt the finest ever imported into this country. I confidently recommend them as being really of unusual merit.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME Last evening there was a pleasant entertainment at the Children's Home but owing to the bad condition of the travelling the attendance was rather light Some time ago a club was formed among the inmates of the home but owing to the changes among the children it gradually lost its organization, but during the month of October last the club was reorganized, officers elected, and the organization was named the Variety Club. This Club meets once a week, and have recitations, declamations, singing, and exercises in their different branches of study, and on the first of each month a programme is made up from the different exercises, which have been under rehearsal, and the Club give an entertainment for the friends of the institution. THE PENOBSCOT FARMERS CLUB meet at [illegible] Orrington next Saturday March [illegible] The meeting was not held last week on account of the storm All interested in Agriculture, with their ladies are requested to be present Merchants manufacturers and mechanics are expecting to receive great benefits from the new impetus given to our farming community by this society Agriculture is now commanding the attention of all classes and men of the first [illegible] are engaged in furthering its interests and all classes are beginning to realize the extent and influence of the agricultural interest The present anxious inquiry for knowledge on agricultural topics betokens the existence of a want which must be supplied It is only by knowing the principles which govern the operations of the farmer that ultimate success can be attained All admit agriculture is a commanding interest and respect should be paid to it by a liberal legislation Those men who are always ready to praise agriculture, but who go in to spasms when help or appropriation is asked for it are growing beautifully less

The farmers need organization—they want farmers' clubs and libraries They need more intercourse to see and learn what other farmers are doing and adopt the improvements made by them This club is doing its share of this noble work Every farmer within a reasonable distance should attend these meetings and hear and be heard A splendid opportunity is here offered for some, of our rich and liberal citizens to offer premiums for special crops Whatever amount is offered in this direction will lessen their taxes more than a week's grumbling, and perhaps cause two spires of grass or corn to grow where but one grew before

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

The undersigned, John J. VEGETINE

Purifies the Blood, Renovates and Invigorates the Whole System.

Its Medicinal properties are

Alterative, Tonic, Solvent, and Diuretic.

Vegetine is made exclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots and herbs, and so strongly concentrated that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of SCROFULA, SCROFULOUS HUMOR, TUMORS, CANCER, CANCEROUS HUMOR, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, SYPHILITIC DISEASES, CANKER, FAINTNESS AT THE STOMACH, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. SCIATICA, INFLAMMATORY AND CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT, and SPINAL COMPLAINTS, can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For ULCERS and ERUPTIVE DISEASES of the SKIN, PUSTULES, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, BOILS, TETTER, SCALDHEAD and RINGWORM, Vegetine has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For PAINS IN THE BACK, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, DROPSY, FEMALE WEAKNESS, LEUCORRHOEA, arising from internal ulceration, and uterine diseases and GENERAL DEBILITY, Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration, and regulates the bowels.

For CATARRH, DYSPEPSIA, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, HEADACHE, PILES, NERVOUSNESS, and GENERAL PROSTRATION OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM, no medicine has ever given such perfect satisfaction as the Vegetine. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by Vegetine have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public.

WHAT IS VEGETINE?

It is a compound extracted from barks, roots and herbs. It is Nature's Remedy. It is perfectly harmless from any bad effect upon the system. It is nourishing and strengthening. It acts directly upon the blood. It quiets the nervous system. It gives you good, sweet sleep at night. It is a great panacea for our aged fathers and mothers, for it gives them strength, quiets their nerves, and gives them Nature's sweet sleep, as has been proved by many an aged person. It is the great Blood Purifier. It is a soothing remedy for our children. It has relieved and cured thousands. It is very pleasant to take; every child likes it. It relieves and cures all diseases originating from impure blood. Try the Vegetine. Give it a fair trial for your complaints, then you will say to your friend, neighbor and acquaintance, "Try it, it has cured me."

Valuable Information.

BOSTON, Mass.

MR. H. R. STEVENS—

Dear Sir,—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit until I commenced taking the Vegetine, and before I had completed the first bottle I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth, and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of Vegetine. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the Vegetine's wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.
